

August 2010

I liked the funny stories about pranks they played on each other at tea time at work. They drilled holes in the lip of the tin tea cup of whomever they wanted to annoy so when they took a sip it poured down them! And they tied string around the base of the cups—when the person went to lift the cup, they would yank it away! Tea times were fun!

Work and Play...

9 When you came home you had your dinner and you had to help in the house and do housework, washed the dishes. There wasn't any nice fitted carpets that we have now a days. Floors were polished and done on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and brasses were cleaned. There were all different jobs in the house to do. . .But we did have a social life as well! You went dancing at the weekend—Friday night and Saturday night and sometimes on a Sunday, but you didn't tell your mother you went on a Sunday!

10 . . .We had a very active life. At these times we would think nothing of walking over to Bonnybridge and go into a café for an orange juice and walking back over again, that's maybe about 2 and half miles. . . .No disrespect to the modern children, but I think we entertained ourselves better in these days. We didn't have computers or anything like that to entertain us. . .
