

July 2010

“We learned that when they were kids they used to swim in the river and one of them had a look out and when they saw the red coming down, the lookout would shout out ‘red’ and the kids had to try and get out of the river because if they got caught in the river, they would end up covered in dye and if they went home with red dye on their legs they would get a hiding. They weren’t supposed to go in the river.”

8 Carrongrove had 90% of the catalogues in the world. It was the only paper in the world that could guarantee the true colours. . . In the old days for envelopes, it was always transparent paper and people could read your letters through the envelope. So they put a ‘laid dandy’ on and it made it all squiggly so you couldn’t read it

. . .Trivial Pursuit’, that was the order that saved Carrongrove from going down in 1980. It was a gold mine for Carrongrove, made here, shipped to Canada and sent all over the world. We made 20,000 ton a year just purely for Trivial Pursuit.

. . .Know Monopoly? That whole board game was made in our group. Carrongrove made the board, Westfield made the money and St Cutlers made the coloured bits. A group effort.
